

Wisconsin's No call list works fine the way it is currently setup. If I am no longer using the services of a company, I have no problem with allowing them one call to try and get me back as a customer. However, if they can't get the job done with one phone call then they shouldn't have the right to keep badgering me as much as they want to for 18 months.